

OUR PHILOSOPHY

Rosevale School follows the basic philosophy that education is, first and foremost, the task of parents and that the proper education of children is greatly determined by the extent of the personal formation of the parents themselves.

Thus, to be an effective agent of education, the school's concern is primarily the formation of the parents and secondarily, the teachers. With these two sectors properly attended to, the formation of children comes as a natural consequence.

Rosevale School's philosophy rests on the integral education concepts of personal guidance through the mentoring system, high quality academic standards, attention to human and spiritual formation and close collaboration with the parents in the child's education.
